

ST DENYS CHURCH EVINGTON, BULLETIN Sunday 14th December 2025, Third Sunday of Advent

An exposition on Sunday's Gospel Reading: Matthew 11:2-11

presents a crucial moment of transition and clarification regarding the roles of John the Baptist and Jesus, challenging the expectations of the time.

In verses 2-6, imprisoned for his preaching, John the Baptist sends his disciples to Jesus with a direct, poignant question: "Are you the one who is to come or are we to wait for another?". John was likely doubting. John's vision of the Messiah involved swift, fiery judgment, but Jesus' ministry appeared much different, focused on service and healing rather than wrath or political upheaval.

Jesus' response does not offer a theological declaration but points to his actions as fulfilment of prophetic scripture, particularly Isaiah. He tells the disciples: "Go and tell John what you hear and see: the blind receive their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, and the poor have good news brought to them". Jesus concludes with a subtle caution: "And blessed is anyone who does not fall away on account of me".

In vs 7-11, after John's disciples leave, Jesus speaks to the crowds about John, dispelling any notion that John was a fickle or weak figure. He emphasizes John's steadfastness and his vital identity as "much more than a prophet". Jesus identifies John as the specific messenger foretold in the Old Testament, the one sent to prepare the way for the Messiah.

In a profound statement, Jesus declares: "Truly I tell you, among those born of women there has not arisen anyone greater than John the Baptist". John bridges the Old and New Testaments, marking the end of the age of prophetic anticipation and the beginning of the Kingdom era.

Yet, Jesus adds a paradox: "Yet the least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he". This highlights that those who have the full revelation of Christ through his death and resurrection, and who participate in his restorative ministry, possess a greater understanding and a more complete experience of God's Kingdom than John did in his time of preparation.

The whole passage is about the nature of the Kingdom of God and the challenge of aligning human expectations with divine reality. True faith involves "seeing and hearing" God at work in unexpected ways, especially among the marginalized, and participating in that redemptive work. The Kingdom is present in Jesus' acts of healing and proclamation, even if its ultimate completion is yet to come.
